President Obama simply did not deliver what I needed to hear last night. He made some good points but where was his passion? Why did he not talk about his greatest achievement--the Affordable care Act? Why did he not remind Americans that they no longer have to worry about capping out their insurance and having to cover all of their medical care out of their pocket? Why did he not mention people like me, who now have an insurance company that pays for my preventative screenings and birth control saving me over $2000 a year? Why not mention the children who can no longer be denied medical care by greedy insurance companies who only want to take money from healthy clients?

HE did make a good point when he talked foreign policy. This is not a man of war. Unlike George Bush who never met a war he did not want American troops involved in, Obama would rather do "nation building" here in America rather than in countries thousands of miles away. I like that. It is about time we have a leader who cares more about American citizens and their health and their homes than he does about an Iraqi or Afghan citizen. It is time America stop trying to force our beliefs on countries who don't want them and don't share them.

I do not agree with Obama on tax deductions. This country is in a load of debt and is it any wonder? Forty-seven percent of working American families pay ZERO federal income tax. Why? Because our government bribes people to have children they can not afford. That some in this country are considered too poor to pay their fair share of taxes is insulting to people like me and my husband who have never seen a tax refund. WHY? Because we refuse the government's bribe to procreate. Democrat or Republican, Americans are always rewarded for breeding. This is wrong. ALL Americans should be contributing something to our great country no matter how rich or how poor. Certainly the person who CHOOSES to have 8 children should not get rewarded while the person who has none is forced to pay their fair share. Is it any wonder we are in such dire straights with trillions in deficit when half of working Americans pay nothing toward supporting our government?

I also don't agree with our President on Illegal Immigration. Now read what I said--ILLEGAL immigration. No one should be rewarded with cheaper college or a free ride to stay in our country when their entire life has been a crime. By breathing our air in America illegals are breaking our law and to reward their children by letting them attend college at a cheaper tuition than American citizens is simply again, rewarding irresponsible behavior. I have too many family members my own grandfather and great grandfather included who came to America legally. They were from Greece and when they went to the store the food packages were not written in Greek for them. No teachers in the public schools their children attended spoke Greek. They were forced to assimilate. They were so proud the day they pledged allegiance to The United States of America. They became citizens, they were proud to pay taxes to support their new country. I am sorry, the illegals who sneak into America under the dead of night and pay no taxes, that send their children to public school expecting the teachers to speak their language. They go to our emergency rooms when they fall ill expecting free medical care most Americans don't even enjoy. If they want the American dream, there are legal ways to go about it. This is what our President should be advocating and he should be enforcing our immigration laws. Only people committed to becoming American citizens with all the responsibilities that go with that honor, should be given the American dream that many American born citizens have had to give up.

I still believe Obama is a better choice than Romney. However, Obama still has a lot of work to do before November or he may find himself looking for a new home. At least he can afford one.
